THE Psychological Bulletin PROCEEDINGS OF THE TWENTY-THIRD ANNUAL MEETING OF THE AMERICAN PSYCHOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION, PHILADELPHIA, PENN-SYLVANIA, DECEMBER 29, 30, 31, 1914. Report Of The Secretary, R. M. Ogden, University Of Kansas. The American Psychological Association held its twenty-third annual meeting at the University of Pennsylvania, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, December 29, 30 and 31, 1914, in affiliation with the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology. The sessions were well attended, and the program provoked much discussion of a profitable character. The outstanding feature of the program was the large number of papers reporting experimentation in the field of normal psychology. Of the forty-five papers read, sixteen were of this class. The joint session with section L of the American Association for the Advancement of Science afforded an interesting program of seven papers on educational phases of psychology, while a special session for mental tests added six papers, indicating the continued activity of the laboratories in the investigation of this important subject. At the joint session with the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology, a varied program of general, social, and abnormal psychology was provided. Special sessions were also devoted to physiological psychology, with six titles, and to animal and abnormal psychology, with five. As a special feature of the first session for experimental psychology, Professor J. W. Baird of Clark University offered a demonstration of the introspective method. This was followed with great interest and...
